

National Student Exchange Opportunities for Students Pursuing Speech-Language Pathology (SLP)

The National Student Exchange (NSE) Program at ISU allows for intercollegiate study away. Through the NSE, you can spend a semester or a year at another member university in the U.S.A. There are several universities in the NSE program that offer undergraduate classes in SLP (sometimes called Communication Sciences and Disorders, or Speech, Language, and Hearing Sciences).

For more information about the NSE program, please see the Iowa State NSE website: <https://www.nse.dso.iastate.edu/>.

To see a list of the NSE institutions that offer undergraduate classes in SLP, follow this link and then select "Communication Disorders" from the drop-down list of Majors; <https://nse.org/exchange/majors/>.

Below is information for some of the universities that are a part of the NSE program. It shows some of the classes offered that may serve as pre-requisites for some graduate programs in SLP.
